Banker Now Rules Australia

A quick look at Wikipedia shows us that we now have a banker leading our country. If Mr Turnbull wants to prove himself as a new style of politician we suggest he moves quickly to call a Royal Commission into banking and finance. He knows how banks abuse their powerful position to the detriment of the people. His previous employer - bankers Goldman Sachs - virtually runs the government in the USA (see stories in the links below).

From Mr Turnbull's bio (by the way, not mentioned on his own website) - "In 1987, he established an investment banking firm, Whitlam Turnbull & Co Ltd, in partnership with Neville Wran (a former Labor Premier of New South Wales) and the former State Bank of New South Wales chief executive, Nicholas Whitlam (son of Gough Whitlam, a former Labor Prime Minister of Australia). Whitlam parted company with the others in 1990 and the firm operated as Turnbull & Partners Ltd from then until 1997, when Turnbull moved to become a managing director and later a partner of Goldman Sachs.

Turnbull was a director of FTR Holdings Ltd (1995-2004), chair and managing director of Goldman Sachs Australia (1997-2001) and a partner with Goldman Sachs and Co (1998-2001).

In May 2002, Turnbull appeared before the HIH Insurance Royal Commission and was questioned on Goldman Sachs's involvement in the possible privatisation of one of the acquisitions of the collapsed insurance company. The Royal Commissioner's Report made no adverse findings against him or Goldman Sachs."

Malcolm Turnbull last night talked about "Liberal values." He can prove himself very quickly: Axe government metadata spying on citizens. End Corporate graft and corruption. Liberal Democracy - much like Social Democracy - can never work out if criminals are running the show. Investigate the banks Mr Turnbull. Stand up for the people - not party donors - and you might just make a good go of it.
